“People have learnt to appreciate their living environment, apartments and offices more in 2020. The value of natural light, long-term comfort and airflow will become even more dominant this year in design.”

– Pitsou Kedem

Tel Aviv architect Pitsou Kedem revives traditional Israeli architecture through a Mid-Century lens. Attributing his design principles to the modernist movement, Pitsou Kedem pursues simple rectangular forms and a minimalist aesthetic. The architect's Old Jaffa House 4, defined by its age-old stone arches, pays respect to the ancient architecture found in the Old City of Jaffa.
